Elective courses may be offered during Fall, Winter, Spring, and Summer, providing students with a great deal of flexibility in completing their American Studies major. However, due to the program's size, there is no flexibility regarding when the required AM ST courses are offered. AM ST 303 is offered only during the Fall semester, while AM ST 304 is offered only during the Winter semester. Because 303 is a prerequisite for enrolling in 304, students should enroll in AM ST 303 during the Fall of their sophomore year (or the Fall of their junior year if they are entering the American Studies major a bit later). After completing AM 303 in the Fall, students should immediately thereafter complete AM ST 304 during the subsequent Winter semester. Students may not enroll in AM ST 490 (the senior capstone course) until after they have completed AM ST 304. AM ST 490 is offered only in Fall and Winter. This means that if a student enrolls in AM ST 304 in January of a particular calendar year, the earliest they could possibly complete AM ST 490 would be in December of the same calendar year. Before declaring the American Studies major, students who are juniors and seniors should consult with Dr. Dave McMillan of the Liberal Arts Advisement Center (801-422-3541) to determine the graduation timeline they should anticipate in completing the American Studies major. All students are encouraged to work with Dr. McMillan to outline an efficient path toward graduation.

The Discipline
Focusing on the United States of America, the American Studies major examines the sweep of American experiences, social movements, and cultural conditions from a variety of viewpoints. Making use of required courses as well as a highly flexible set of elective courses, the program offers students significant latitude in studying topics in U.S. literature, history, gender, humanities, regions, politics, ethnicities, geography, art, economics, religion, folklore, and other issues. Majors are encouraged to develop particular skills in writing, research, and social, political, and economic analysis. The program not only provides for rich interdisciplinary experiences but also exposure to a variety of excellent scholars and teachers.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
While preserving the flexibility that makes the American Studies major appealing to many students, the American Studies Program actively seeks to prepare students for their lives and careers after graduation. To this end, each American Studies major receives course credit for either a career-related internship or a career-related minor. Upon graduation, students often enter the workforce in fields related to their internships or minors, with placements ranging from history teaching to international finance, from the tech sector to the military, from editing to university advisement, from museum curatorships to politics, and from nonprofits to many other career opportunities. Some American Studies majors also choose to continue their educations at the graduate level; majoring in American Studies can be excellent preparation for entering law school, medical school, business school, and masters and PhD programs in American literature, history, and politics.
