1. No double-counting of courses across requirements.
2. POLI 101R and POLI 297R do not count toward the major or any minor offered by the department.
3. Only 6 hours of POLI 399R (internship credit) may count toward the major.
4. No cooperative education (internship) credit from other universities or colleges will be accepted toward the major.
5. All students are strongly encouraged to complete an internship. Established programs are available through Washington Seminar, Utah State Legislature, or the Kennedy Center. [Students should contact the Political Science Internship Director (945 KMBL, 801-422-2168) at least 60-90 days before the anticipated internship start date or before beginning the search for an internship.]
6. Only 6 hours of POLI 497R (Mentored Research) may count toward the major.
7. We strongly encourage students to take POLI 398, a career lecture series course.

BA in Political Science: Legal Studies (735113) 2022-2023

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES:
Students may have the opportunity to work as research assistants to political science faculty. Some students are paid research or teaching assistants, and others receive mentored research credit. Mentored research credit can apply towards elective credit in the major.

INTERNSHIPS, CO-OP & PRACTICAL ED:
The Political Science Department offers internships in Washington D.C., with the Utah State Legislature, and with other state and local government entities. International mentored research and internship opportunities are also offered through the department.

HONORARY SOCIETIES AND CLUBS:
A chapter of Sigma Iota Rho (International Studies Honor Society) and the BYU Political Affairs Society (BYUPAS) are offered at BYU. BYUPAS is the official student organization of the BYU Political Science Department. BYUPAS is dedicated to serving students who have interests in applied politics and connecting with them with alumni, faculty, and friends of the University. Members of BYUPAS automatically become members of the Beta Mu chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society. Go to https://clubs.byu.edu/ to join.

CAREERS:
The department has five specialized emphases that help students choose courses that support their desired career paths. Majors can choose an emphasis to pursue and select from an array of courses within each emphasis to satisfy the requirements of the emphasis.

These emphases allow students to specialize in a particular area of Political Science. International Strategy and Diplomacy is designed for majors interested in international/comparative-related careers such as diplomacy and risk analysis, and includes courses on comparative politics, international relations, national security, human rights, etc. Legal Studies is an ideal emphasis for those interested in law school. Courses in the legal studies emphasis include constitutional law, international law, and jurisprudence. The Political Strategy emphasis may be an option for those interested in political and campaign management and features courses on topics such as campaigns and elections, the political role of the media, and state and local government. A fourth emphasis, Research and Analysis, may be the choice of those interested in jobs in data science and related fields, or going on to graduate work in social sciences. It includes course electives in areas such as data visualization, survey research, experimental methods, and qualitative methods. The final emphasis, Global Development, is an option particularly for students interested in political and economic development, with courses on subjects such as regional or country-specific politics, political economy, terrorism, etc.

The department offers several minors to students in Political Science or other majors: Legal Studies, Political Strategy, Political Research and Data Analysis, or International Strategy and Diplomacy. These minors supplement students’ current majors with specific emphases that help them acquire knowledge in more concentrated tracks, and also aid employers in understanding students’ experiences and skills.
